This spring, author and activist Winnie M Li will join the Sexual Harms and Medical Encounters (SHaME) Project for a Writer In Residence Programme.

Winnie will curate an exciting series of panels, talks, and workshops for the SHaME team and the wider public.

These events will explore the roles that creative writing and narrative can play in how both academics and society at large understand the topic of sexual violence.

As a rape survivor herself, Winnie is dedicated to fostering survivor-centred dialogues and founded Clear Lines, the UK's first-ever festival using the arts and discussion to address sexual assault and consent.
